GIFT-MAKING IS ABOUT

	Gift-giving rule	Preferences		Gift-exchange thought processes
		Givers	Recipients	Givers	Recipients
Aspects of the gift	Gifts should be desirable.	Desirable gifts	Feasible gifts	Desirable gifts dazzle when opened.	Feasible gifts provide sure value.
	Gifts should be enjoyed immediately.	Lesser but complete gifts	Better-quality, even if incomplete, gifts	Lesser, complete gifts are appreciated when opened.	Better-quality, incomplete gifts will eventually provide the most value.
	Gifts should be tangible.	Material gifts	Experiential gifts	Material gifts elicit an immediate positive response.	Experiences provide more overall happiness.
Aspects of the giver	Givers should surprise their recipients.	Unrequested gifts	Requested gifts	Unrequested gifts will surprise.	Personally requested gifts are more valuable.
	Givers should be generous.	Thoughtful and expensive gifts	Thoughtfulness and price are unimportant	Thoughtful and expensive gifts signal generosity.	Value does not always correspond with thought or price.
Aspects of the recipient	Gifts should reflect their recipients.	Specific and unique gifts	General gifts and gifts that reflect most important personal interests	Gifts reflecting specific and unique interests signal knowledge of the recipient	Versatile gifts and gifts that reflect important personal interests provide the most value.
	Gifts should symbolize the giver-recipient relationship.	Socially responsible gifts	Traditional gifts	The recipient will feel a "warm glow" when receiving a socially responsible gift.	A socially responsible gift provides little ownership value.

GIFT-MAKING IS ABOUT

Gift-giving is a form of transfer of property rights over particular objects.

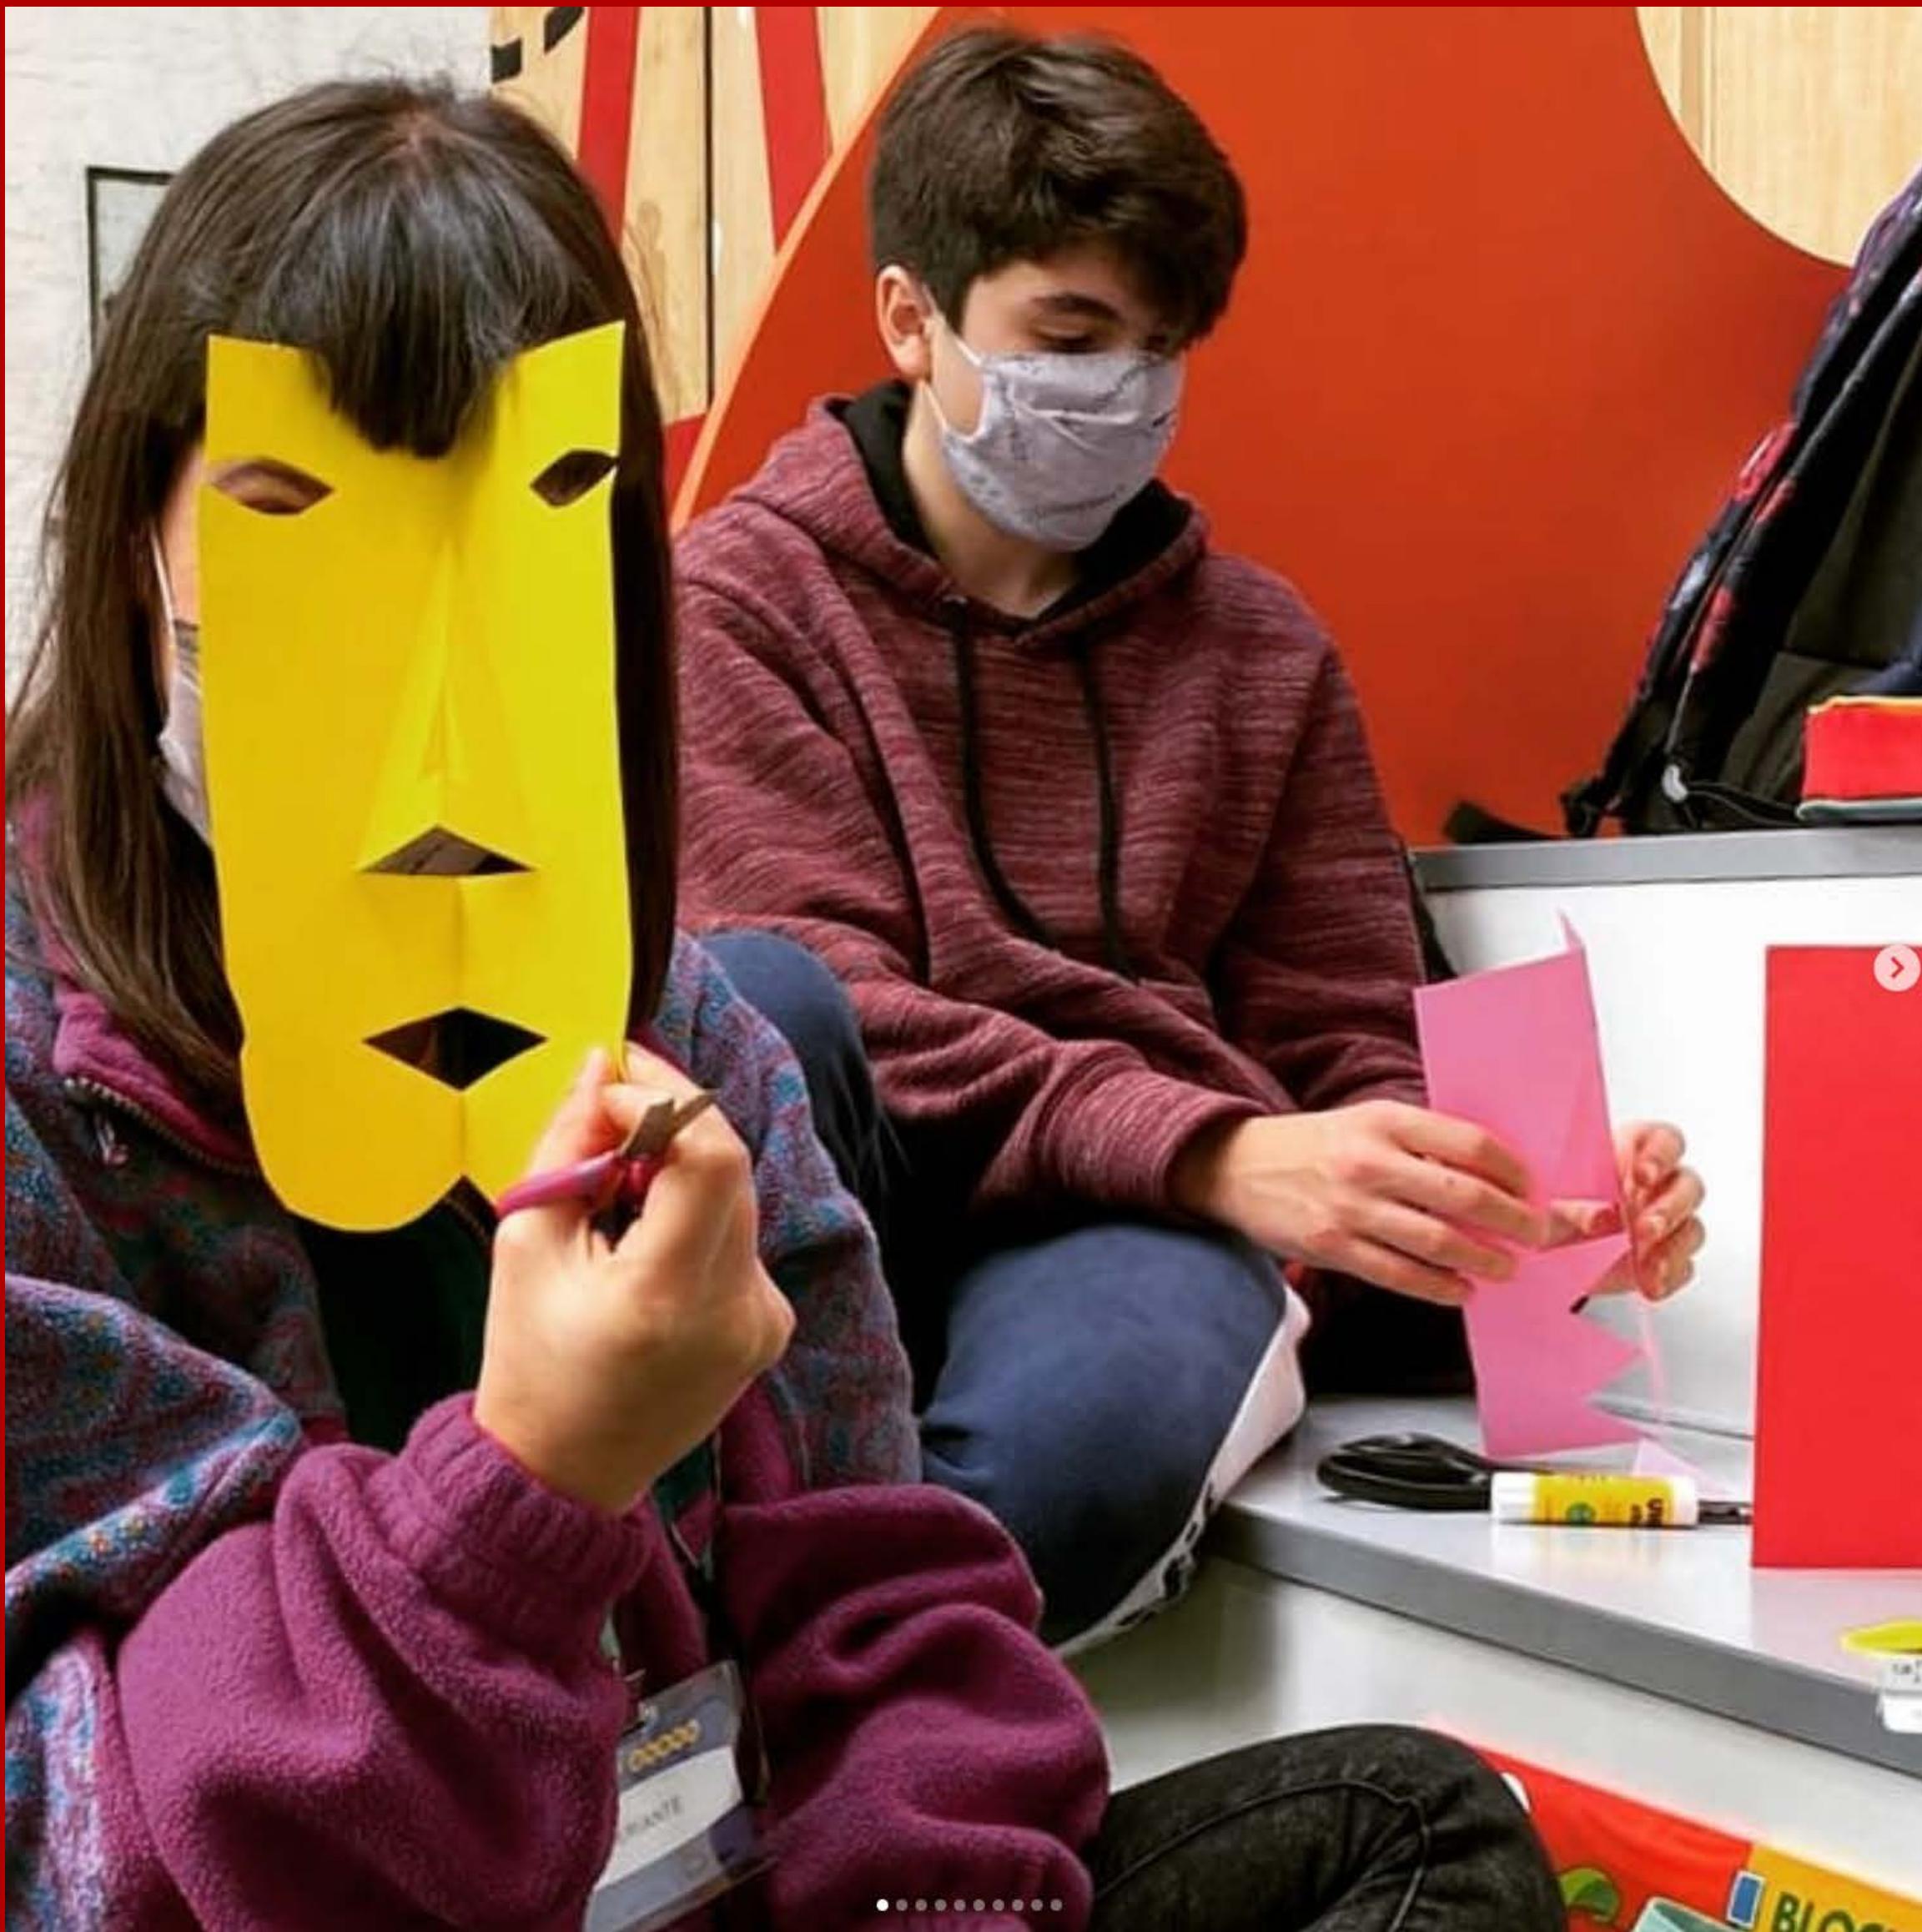

i guess i'm saying that curation for the world is a job description

but curation for one person is a gift

GIFT-GIVING IS ABOUT

WHEN WE GIVE SOMEONE A GIFT, THE PAPER WE WRAP IT IN IS A PHYSICAL REPRESENTATION OF A RITUALIZED MESSAGE.

NARRATOPIA, CYNTHIA F. KURTZ

GIFT-WRAPPING IS ABOUT

IN JAPAN, THE CONCEPT OF WRAPPING, TSUTSUMI, ISN'T LIMITED TO OBSCURING THE GIFT. THERE IS A PURPOSEFUL EFFORT TO IMPROVE THE BEAUTY OF THE GIFT THROUGH ITS WRAPPING, AND TO DEVELOP IT WITH THOUGHT AND CARE. KUNIO EKIGUCHI SAYS THAT GIVING A GIFT IS LIKE WRAPPING ONE'S HEART.

THERE IS SOMETHING THE HUMAN HAND MUST DO, AND ONLY LOVING CARE ENABLES US TO PERFORM SUCH TROUBLESOME MANUAL TASKS TO THE VERY END.

GIFT-WRAPPING IS ABOUT

Insist a little

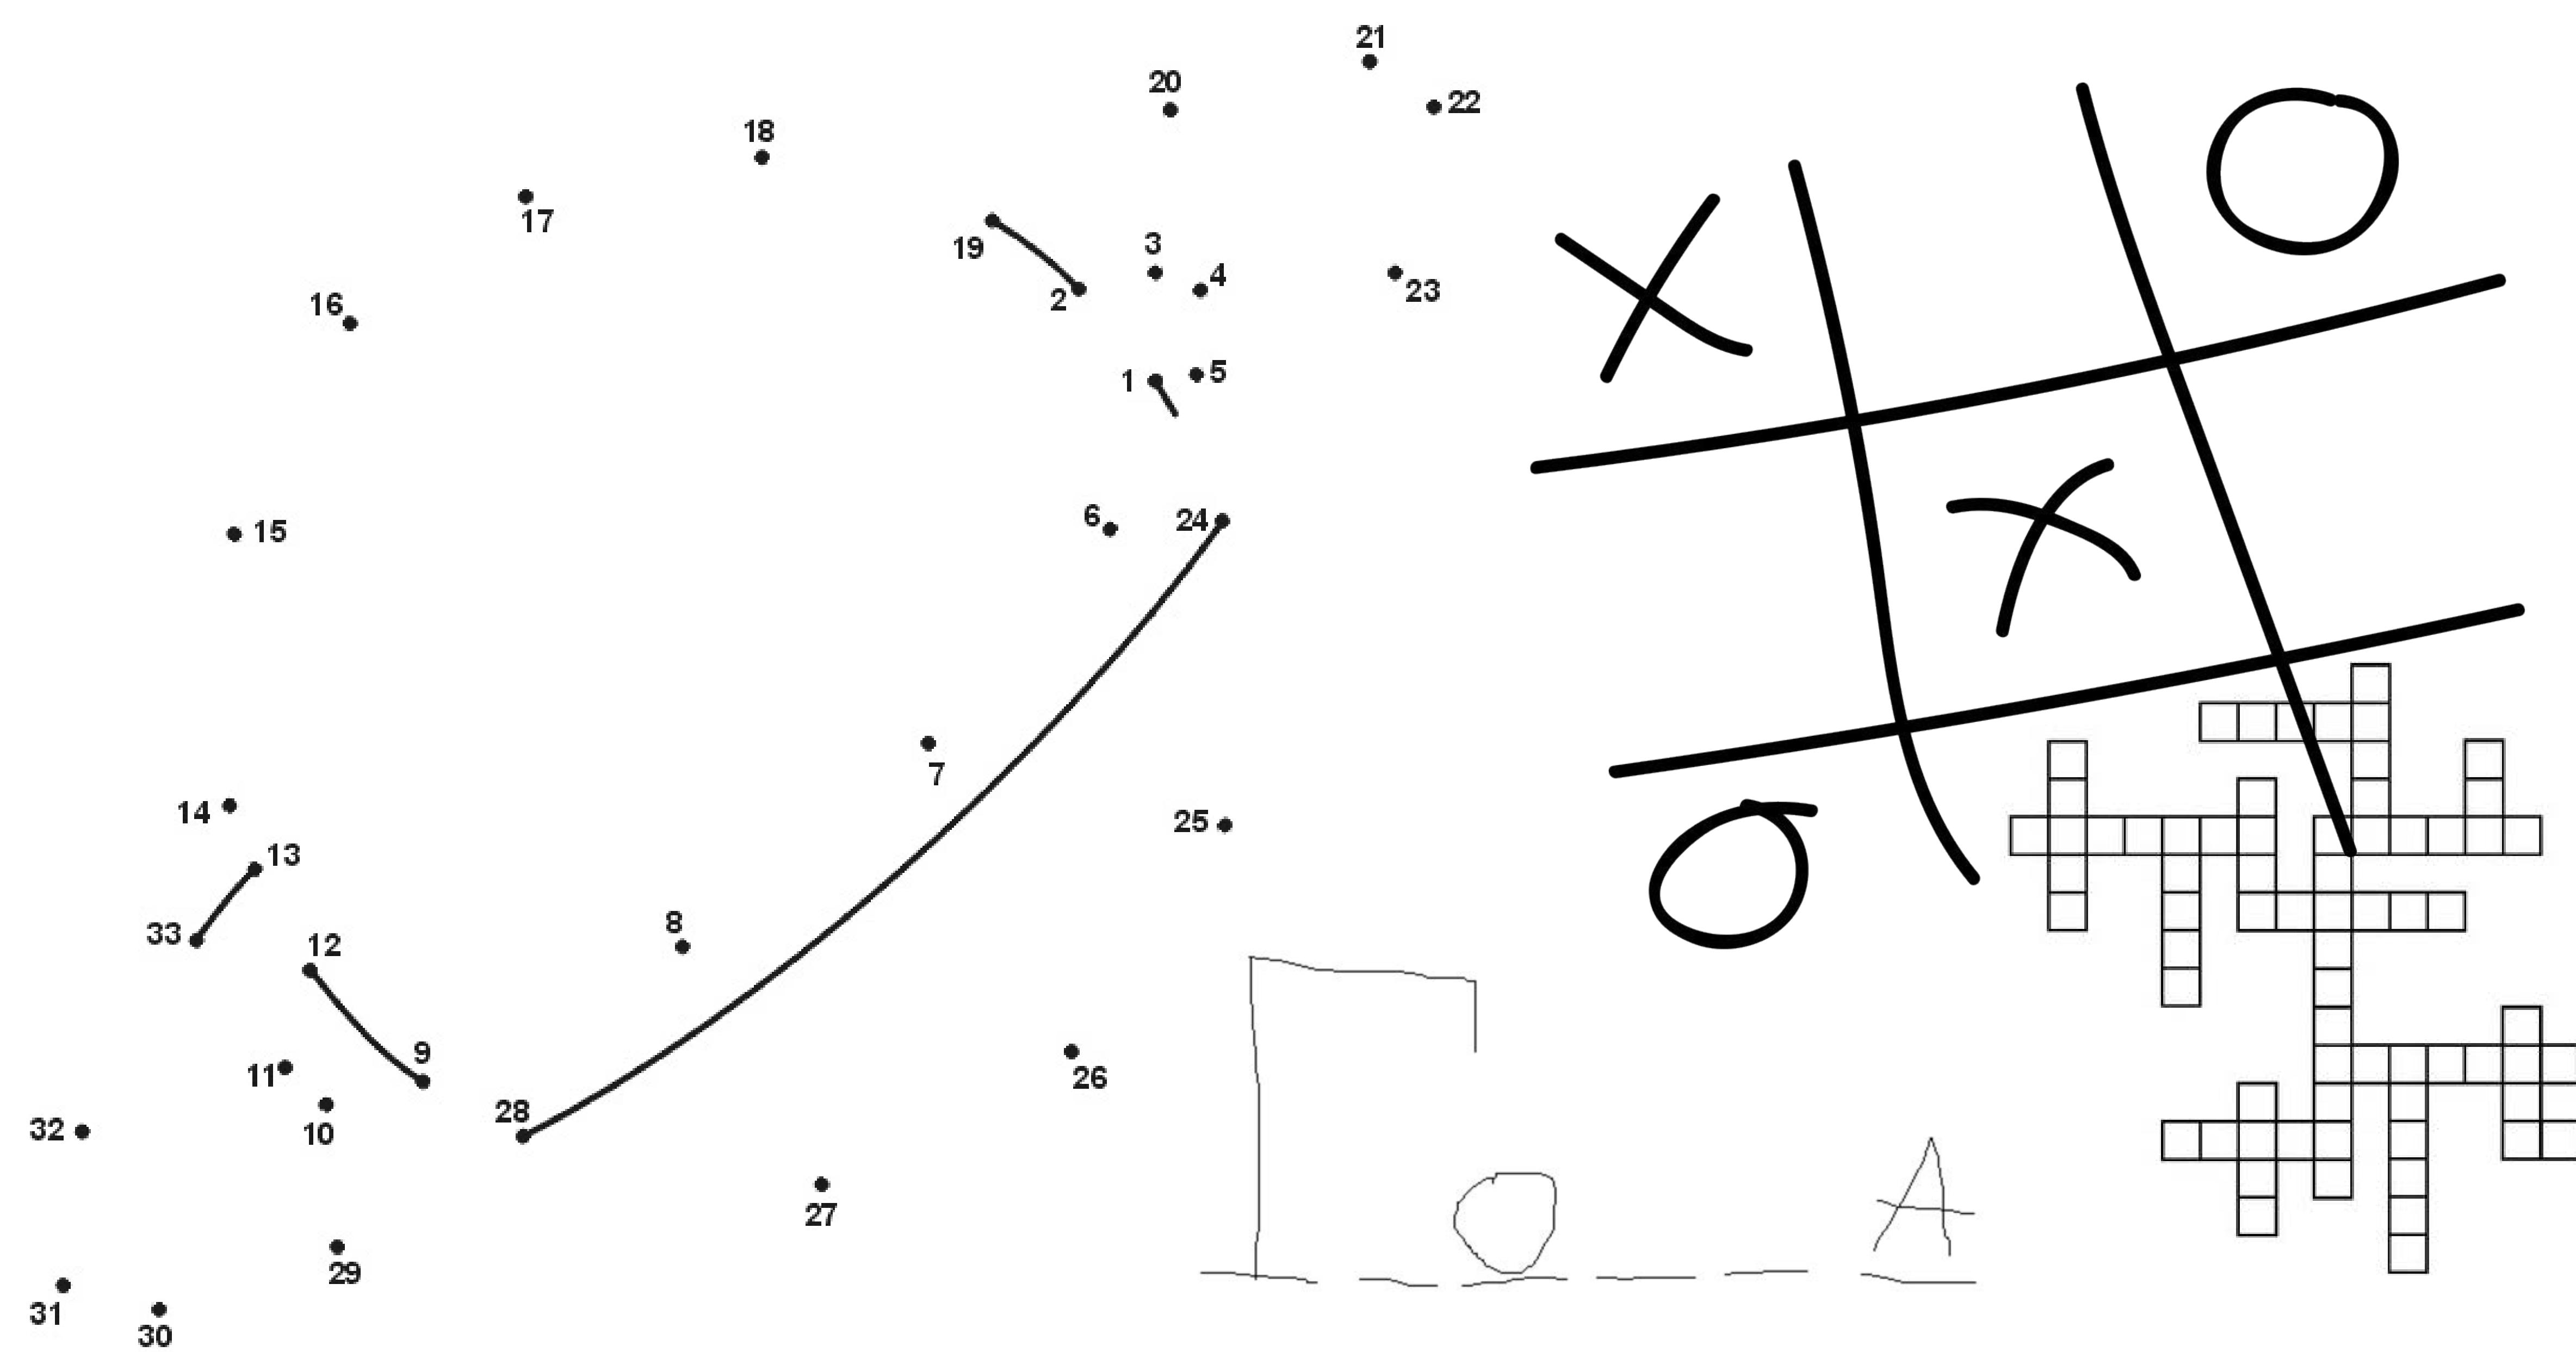

China, Singapore, Taiwan, South Korea, and Japan

In many countries in East Asia, when offering a gift, you should expect to be refused once, twice, or even three times. This is done to avoid seeming greedy or impatient. If you're being offered a gift in one of these places and want to be polite, you're well advised to do the same. Also, when the person finally accepts, you're expected to thank them.

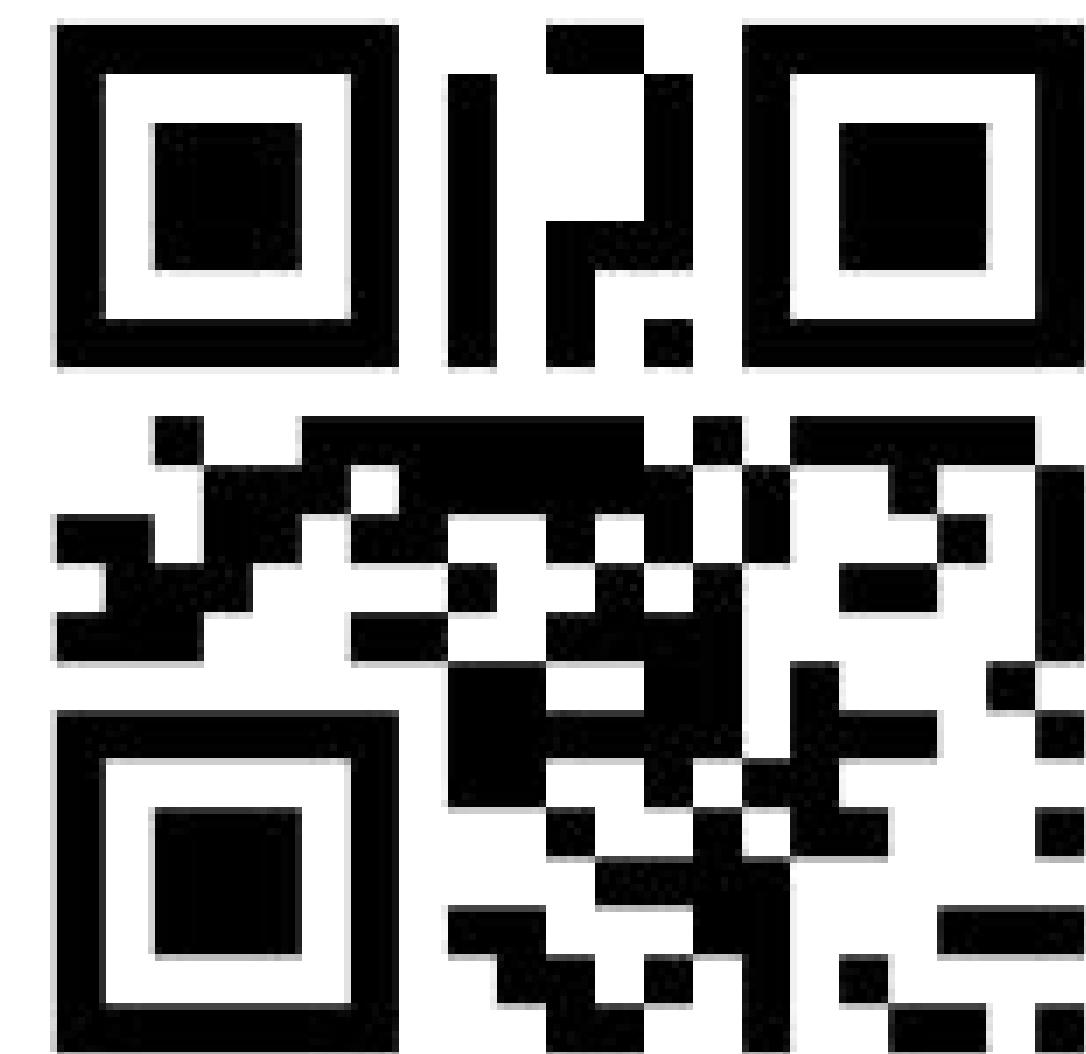

In Chinese culture, wearing a green hat is cause for mockery because of its hidden meaning. When a man “wears a green hat” (daai3 luk6 mou6 戴綠帽), it signifies that his partner is cheating on him – in other words, that he's a cuckold. These days, the saying applies to all genders, but how exactly did this come to be and where did the symbolism come from?
